

d-VISION is a unique project, aimed at cultivating excellence and training future leaders in the fields of industrial design. Inspired and created by Mr. Sami Sagol, owner and chairman of Keter Group, the program serves to fill the missing link between Academia and Industry.

Participants are Israel's design academies most outstanding graduates, who, over the two year course of the program, are given the opportunity to experience the best practical training available at Keter's novel Research and Development facility. Through hands-on experience, and the opportunity to meet with managers, clients and professionals directly, the program enables the interns a unique venue to show their talent and abilities.

The program includes a scholarship towards a Masters degree in design, personal development and leadership courses, a continuing education program, including experimental research projects, lectures and visits abroad. Some of the interns will be offered a position within the Keter group, whilst others will enter the employment
